Description

Lower part of a coconut shell. The shell is thin, but not abraded. The color is natural brown, the texture: rough outside, smooth inside. On one half there are black areas inside. Inside and outside, three grains run in a star shape to the lower tip. Outside this is formed by the grains, so that the top has three side surfaces, which are pierced. A braided ribbon knotted at the ends has been pulled through two holes.
On the outer surface there are several cracks arranged in a circle around the center.
